Performance was initially good, taking advantage of markets that were concerned with inflation and faster rate hikes; unfortunately these gains were then offset amidst the reaction to the tragic events in Ukraine. Commodities markets have been turbocharged in this environment and our long exposures to agricultural, energy and metals were the main drivers of positive performance. Short exposure to Treasury bonds and credit indices also made small contributions. Conversely, our short Euro position suffered from an early jump in the exchange rate before the cross then continued to decline.
